

DAY 27: HONESTY

Pairing is a destructive alliance between two or more people. These are people who like to break off and talk about the group rather than bringing issues to the group so they can be dealt with. This behavior is hugely destructive to the team and is dishonest.

I tell people that if they are engaged in duplicitous behavior as described above, it is like eating double cheeseburgers and drinking triple chocolate malts on their character diet. They are damaging their character, and everyone is watching!

*-from The World's Most Powerful Leadership Principle, by James C. Hunter*

Servant-leaders need to not only stop this type of behavior in themselves, but also work to stop it first in their friend groups and then in their peers.

WE DARE YOU TO...

Show honesty today by confessing to a family member something you need to let go of today and resolve to make it right.

"Some people will not tolerate such emotional honesty in communication. They would rather defend their dishonesty on the grounds that it might hurt others. Therefore, having rationalized their phoniness into nobility, they settle for superficial relationships."
